

Presents:

Have Oregonians changed their priorities and values since the Great Depression?

How do Oregonians balance their priorities and values for schools, parks and the environment with jobs and the economy? Portland General Electric and the Portland Business Alliance recently commissioned Davis, Hibbitts & Midghall to conduct a 600 sample opinion poll about how people in the Portland metropolitan area are feeling about the economy, education, job climate and other issues they care about.

Join us on October 21st for a breakfast forum featuring speakers who will discuss what the poll results mean from an economic perspective, trends seen in the Portland region's opinions over the years and how this data impacts business vitality. The survey tracks changes in attitudes since 2011, and it could impact the Value of Jobs Coalition's goal of making private-sector job retention and creation the region's top priority.
